Duni wins the Environmental Award at The Caterer's 2014 Product Excellence Awards

Duni received the award for its range of compostable unicoloured napkins and tablecoverings at a celebration in London.

The awards recognise excellence and innovation in food, drink and equipment products within the hospitality sector. They cover 29 categories and represent the very best examples of product development in the industry.

With product sourcing vital to business success, the innovations on show at the awards are a product of rising expectations in the market and fierce competition among operators.

Prestigious award for a pioneering range

Gareth Brown, Market Development Manager, Duni UK: "We are delighted that our groundbreaking range of compostable unicoloured tablecoverings and napkins has been recognised with this award. At Duni we are committed to operating in the most resource efficient way possible, and providing our customers with sustainable, stylish solutions. The range, which is the most extensive of its kind in the world, is a product of this commitment."

The awards were presented by Lisa Jenkins, products and suppliers editor of The Caterer and Oliver Cock, commercial director for Compass Group UK & Ireland. Cock: "The Product Excellence Awards allow us to celebrate the producers and suppliers that enable us to deliver the very best food and service."
